About the Faculty

The Past

The predecessor of our Faculty, Juhász Gyula Teacher Training College, was established in 1873 in Budapest with the aim of training teachers for the contemporary elementary school system. This institution was Hungary's first teacher training establishment. Due to the educational reforms introduced by Minister of Culture Kunó Klebelsberg, teacher training programs were transferred to Szeged in 1928. As a result of his reforms, Szeged became a city of students and a vibrant intellectual centre of South-Eastern Hungary. In 1973 the College was named after Szeged's famous poet, Gyula Juhász. In November 2006 the College was integrated into the University of Szeged as the Juhász Gyula Faculty of Education.

The Present

The Faculty is one of the leading institutions in the fields of pre-school, primary school and special teacher education. In addition, we have Bachelor and Master programmes with strong foundations in our traditions of teacher training and art education. In line with the structural changes in the Hungarian higher educational system, the Faculty introduced a wide range of adult education and advanced vocational programs. Also, to deliver quality education, we aim at excellence in academic research, arts and sporting activities.
